ENDS HALF CENTURY

Louisa Lee Schuyler in All Day Session.

HAS CHANGED CONDITIONS

First Child It Sent for Adoption Makes Address: Never Handicapped.'

The State Charities Aid Association yesterday observed the fiftieth anniversary of its founding by Miss Louist Lee Schuyler. The day's program, ending last night with a dinner at the Hetel Biltmore, reviewed the association's half century of accomplishment and set the mark for future development of social service.

Homer Folks, who has been secretary of the organization for the last twentynine years, sketched the lines along which the work will be carried, and mentioned several definite objectives. It will be the aim of the association, he said, to secure special classes for all difficult and backward children in schools; to have clinics available in every part of the State for those apparently mentally disturbed or deficient, to do away with the remaining two-thirds of the volume of tuberculosis as it existed fitteen years ago and to bring prompt and expert medical diagnosis and treatment to every sick and injured person in the State.

Mr. Folks said the association during its fifty years of service had accomplished ix revolutionary changes in social conditions. He described these as having been effected in the care of the second act is occupied. Of course, when the state is the more than the organization of the State Health Department.

First Adopted Child.

The afternoon session was devoted chiefly to the subject of adopted children. The first child the association placed when it began this branch of its work twenty-four years ago, Miss Marjorie Wendell, addressed the association as a guest of honor. She told the story of her experience as an adopted child. "Being adopted," she said, "has never been a handleap to meither socially or in business. Two neighbors of ours were so favorably impressed with adoption that they bott. The parents of children whom they nequired through the association also spoke at the afternoon session. Mrs. Philip Thompson told how she and her husband adopted first one child and then another, and how following the adoption of the second a child of her own was born. "All three are equally dear to me" she said.

The various village characters, including those who paint, dance, sing and write as well as those who can never stop talking long enough to do these things, will syrate in a costume ball. Those on the inside say the rarb will be much more abbrevlated than heretofore this season, principally, of course, because of the warmer weather, which simply demands it.

There is nothing revolutionary in this way of making a drama. Victorien San dou did it so long ago as "Odette," which is not included in the list of his most popular works. Bold as this experiment is, it is not the only indication of a scorn of the popular demand on the part of the author. He makes little or no effort to illuminate his drab fiction with the incidental tricks that may increase the poularity of his work.
